FEATURES

24 Paul McCartney's Rock 'n' Roll Odyssey

Paul McCartney: Get Back is Richard Lester's riveting account of a rock and roll odyssey: McCartney's epic 1989-1990 "Get Back" world tour. The film, reports noted rock critic and historian Dave Marsh, is "not just a concert extravaganza—though the focus never leaves the music—but a statement of purpose from one of popular music's—and rock and roll's—great showmen."

27 Mastering the Fine Art of Animation

For Disney animator Glen Keane, who created both the magnificent eagle Marahute in Rescuers Down Under and the title character of Aladdin, an important source for his art lies in the lessons he learned from "the old masters"—the first generation of Disney animators.

A LETTER TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS

Greetings from Wonderland!

As many of you probably recognize, pictured here with me are some of the wonderful characters that inhabit The Disney Channel's newest and most popular program for young children, Adventures in Wonderland. In less than six months on the air, Adventures in Wonderland has already won an Emmy Award and has become the most-watched morning show on our network. The critics have given Alice and her beloved friends rave reviews, with TV Guide claiming that "the talented and exuberant cast generate enough energy to power Disney World's Magic Kingdom."

In fact, viewer response has been so positive that we have decided, beginning October 1, to present a different episode of Adventures in Wonderland every afternoon at 3:30 p.m. (ET/PT) in addition to its daily airing at 7:30 a.m. This way those of you who can't watch the show in the morning will now be able to catch it later in the day.

Plus, on weekends starting October 3, you'll be able to enjoy more episodes of Adventures in Wonderland at 9:00 a.m. (ET/PT) every Saturday and Sunday morning.

We've decided to go one step further and create special presentations of Adventures in Wonderland that we will be airing at 7:30 in the evening once each month. Some of these prime-time episodes will help children understand important social issues such as caring for the environment, preventing drug abuse, and improving race relations. Other special episodes will have holiday themes, celebrating Halloween, Christmas, and Valentine's Day.

We hope that by offering Adventures in Wonderland at additional times, all of you who have not yet had a chance to view this warm and fun-loving series will now be able to enter our special world, where imagination and creativity are brought together to teach and entertain children.

ARCHIVIST DAVE SMITH ON DISNEY FACTS, FIGURES, HISTORY AND TRIVIA

Readers with questions about Disney trivia can write to Dave Smith, c/o The Walt Disney Archives, Disney Mail Code 1200, 500 South Buena Vista St., Burbank, CA 91521.

Disney Facts OUR READERS WANT TO KNOW

I ran across a soundtrack album in a thrift store for a Disney Robin Hood movie. It is not the 1973 animated film but an older, live-action version which I cannot find listed anywhere. Why?

—A.E., Windham, ME

You missed a listing of the earlier Robin Hood movie because its title is The Story of Robin Hood and His Merrie Men. The film came out in 1952 and was one of the first completely live action movies made by Disney. The production was done in England and starred Richard Todd as the legendary outlaw. The film is currently available on video.

Why have I seen several colors—yellow, blue, red—used for Dumbo's hat on merchandise?

—W.K., Sacramento, CA

Over the years, merchandise licensees often selected clothing colors for the characters based on their own tastes, so that is why you find not only Dumbo but all the characters in various styles and colors of clothing. Dumbo's hat in the film is a golden yellow, so that is the "official" color, and we try to have publishers and merchandise licensees use that color wherever possible.

BAMBI CELEBRATES ITS 50TH ANNIVERSARY

We do not want to let a special milestone in Disney history slip by: It was on August 9, 1942—50 years ago—that Bambi made its debut with a special premiere in London, England. It opened in the United States four days later.

Bambi had been a major undertaking for the Disney Studio. It had actually been put into production as work on Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, the first Disney feature, was winding down. But the story of Bambi was different from anything else the Studio had ever attempted. It was more serious, and all the characters were animals. Walt knew that for it to be believable, his artists would have to become proficient in drawing animals. In striving for realism, the artists heard lectures from animal experts, made field trips to the Los Angeles Zoo, watched specially filmed nature footage shot in the forests of Maine, and even studied the movements of two fawns that were donated to the Studio. The meticulous work was time-consuming; even taking care to see that the spots on the fawn's backs remained constant meant fewer drawings could be finished in a day. The film moved exceedingly slowly through the production process, but Walt was delighted with the results he was seeing. "Fellas, this stuff is pure gold," he told the animators.

Bambi was released at a difficult time, with the U.S. deep in World War II, so its initial profits were low, but the story of the little deer coming of age has endured. Today Bambi is universally regarded as one of Walt Disney's most charming films.

Since Walt Disney was a polo enthusiast, what was the name of his horse?

—S.P., Parsippany, NJ

Actually, when Walt played polo in the 1930s he had a stable of seven polo ponies. Their names were June, Slim, Nava, Arrow, Pardner, Tacky, and Tommy. Walt became interested in polo in 1932, and enlisted several Disney staff members and his brother Roy to join in. Eventually the Disney team competed in matches at the Riviera Country Club against such luminaries as Spencer Tracy, Darryl F. Zanuck, and Will Rogers.

Inspired by the enchantment of the Disney animated classic... a Bradford Exchange recommendation

It's just a twinkling of an eye before the radiant Cinderella meets her Prince Charming at the Royal Ball. This magical moment when Cinderella's dreams come true has delighted generations.

Now the essence of the animator's art, as achieved by The Walt Disney Studios in the classic film Cinderella, has been captured on a fine porcelain limited-edition collector's plate. And like exceptional plates that command hundreds of dollars on the plate market, the "Cinderella" plate appears to have what it takes to go up in value once the edition closes.

Some exceptional plates appreciate in value; some plates go down, and many remain at or near issue price. But the "Cinderella" plate edition is strictly limited to a maximum of 150 firing days, and demand is expected to be strong. So if you wish to obtain this plate at the $29.90 issue price, the time to act is now. To order your plate—fully backed by our unconditional 365-day guarantee—send no money now, simply complete and mail the coupon at right.

Walt Disney Records SHAKE IT ALL ABOUT WITH LITTLE RICHARD

Little Richard—the emancipator and architect of rock 'n' roll—transforms the tot-rock arena on October 20 with the release of Shake It All About. A part of Walt Disney Records' Spotlight Artist series, Shake It All About features 12 popular children's favorites as performed by the wild man of rock 'n' roll himself. The tunes range from "Oh Where, Oh Where Has My Little Dog Gone" and "The Hokey Pokey" to "Zip-A-Dee-Doo-Dah" and "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star"—plus "On Top of Spaghetti" and a remake of Little Richard's own chart-topping hit "Keep A Knockin'."

With his blend of humor, hot music, and world-renowned "woos," Little Richard on Shake It All About continues to expand the musical medium he first revolutionized with "awop-bop-a-loo-mop-alop-bam-boom."

Celebrating Bambi's 50th Anniversary FROM THE WALT DISNEY CLASSICS COLLECTION

To commemorate the 50th anniversary of Bambi, Disney artists and animators have created a special series for the Walt Disney Classics Collection. These newly released Bambi sculptures convey some of the most memorable moments from the film, including Bambi's first meeting with the skunk Flower. This figurine, entitled "He Can Call Me A Flower If He Wants To," has been produced in a hand-numbered limited edition of 10,000. Additional characters featured in Walt Disney Classics Collection's Bambi series include Thumper, Thumper's sister, Friend Owl, and a numbered, limited edition sculpture of the Field Mouse reaching for his morning shower—a hand-blown crystal dewdrop. All figurines in the Bambi series bear a gold 50th anniversary marking to celebrate this special occasion.

ALADDIN COMES TO A THEATER NEAR YOU ON NOVEMBER 25

On November 25, Walt Disney Pictures releases its latest animated film, Aladdin. This age-old tale of the young man with the magic lamp and its genie is sure to have moviegoers talking for quite awhile. You see, the genie in the film can assume any shape he wishes, and during the movie he takes on over 60 different forms...including a dragon, a game show host, a ventriloquist, a slot machine—even an airline flight attendant. If these images don't quite fit the traditional view of the story, remember this is the Disney version. Just as Beauty and the Beast added some unexpected twists to that age-old story—such as the talking teapot, clock, and candelabra—so, too, will Aladdin add some fresh surprises to the timeless tale. So mark your calendars: Aladdin will be debuting at a theater near you on November 25, and we're sure it will provide a magical experience for you and your family during the holiday season.

The American Teacher Awards SALUTING AMERICA'S EDUCATORS

On December 6, The Disney Channel is proud to present our third annual celebration of American educators with the premiere of The Walt Disney Company Presents The American Teacher Awards.

Presented in partnership with The Coca-Cola Company and Delta Air Lines, The American Teacher Awards will once again be broadcast live to Disney Channel subscribers from Los Angeles's Pantages Theater. Thirty-six teachers, three each from 12 different areas of instruction, will be honored that evening. From the 12 outstanding teachers in each category of education, the entire 36 teachers will select "The Outstanding Teacher of 1992."

Then, in the weeks following The American Teacher Awards, The Disney Channel will present The Disney Channel Salutes The American Teacher. Sixty profiles of outstanding educators will air throughout 1993. A new teacher profile will premiere every Tuesday evening at 8:50 p.m. (Eastern/Pacific Time; 7:50 p.m. Central); profiles encore Sundays at 3:50 p.m. (ET/PT).

And a final note: applications

Coming Next Summer

A STELLAR CAST APPEARS IN THE NEW DISNEY CHANNEL MINISERIES HEIDI

The Tyrolean Alps of Austria provided the magnificent backdrop this past summer for the production of an upcoming Disney Channel miniseries to premiere in June of 1993. The miniseries: Johanna Spyri's classic tale Heidi. The story of a young orphan who struggles to win her stern grandfather's love—and who then must struggle to stay with him in their beloved mountains—Heidi is a visual feast, filmed on location near Salzburg and Mattrei in the East Tyrol.

Matching the scenery is a superb cast of actors. Playing Heidi's grief-stricken grandfather is none other than Jason Robards; his co-stars include Jane Seymour and Patricia Neal. Portraying Heidi is Noely Thornton. This superb miniseries is in the tradition of The Disney Channel's Emmy-winning Great Expectations.

for the 1993 American Teacher Awards will be available beginning in October. Applications may be obtained by writing The Walt Disney Company Presents The American Teacher Awards, P.O. Box 9805, Calabasas, CA 91372.

A Going Home Special PRESENTING RINGO STARR

Lovers of contemporary music and Beatles fans will be delighted to hear that one of The Disney Channel's Going Home music specials will feature Ringo Starr. Ringo, who toured throughout the country this summer with his All-Starr Band, returns to Liverpool in this special which combines musical performances with personal interviews. The music ranges from classic Beatles cuts from the '60s to music from Ringo's current album, Time Takes Time. Ringo Starr: Going Home premieres this winter.

Father Christmas

From the International Santa
Figurine Collection

Introducing "Father Christmas," an original work of art capturing all the pageantry and spirit of Christmases past. From his rosy cheeks and bushy brows, to his colorful paisley print vest—there's a wealth of detail to delight the eye and spark the imagination. "Father Christmas" is meticulously crafted of cold-cast porcelain and painted entirely by hand, right down to the lavish accents of gleaming 23K gold on his lantern and staff.

Striding across the cobblestones through the new fallen snow, he's a grand vision of a Victorian Santa. The pockets of his billowing, fur trimmed robe overflow with toys. A great white beard highlights his gentle smile and the twinkle of his bright blue eyes.

"Father Christmas," premiere issue in the International Santa Figurine Collection, is available exclusively from the Hamilton Collection for only $55 (plus $4.40 shipping and handling.) As the owner of "Father Christmas," you will have the right—but no obligation—to acquire upcoming issues in the collection. Each will be accompanied by an individually numbered Certificate of Authenticity. After Hours BLADING

It all started in the early '80s when Scott Olson, an enterprising high school student and hockey player from Minneapolis, searched for a way to keep skating in the summer to stay in shape. So Olson added some wheels to his ice skates...and a whole new sport was born.

Now, according to the International In-Line Skating Association (IISA), blading is the fastest growing sport in the world. There are over 6.2 million bladers in the U.S. and in-line skates are a near-$300 million industry.

Joe Janasz, IISA's executive director, says the sport is pursued by people of all ages, five-year-olds to seniors, and ranges from driveway pick-up

MICKEY MOUSE CLUB HOLIDAY MEMORIES

This October 23, the Mickey Mouse Club is hosting its hot primetime Halloween celebration, so we asked two of the Mouseketeers for their favorite Halloween memories.

WORDEN

Marc Worden hails from Toronto, Canada. Marc recalls his first Halloween costume when he portrayed his idol: "I was dressed up as Groucho Marx, with his funny coat and that big moustache."

NITA BOOTH

Nita Booth's first costume also comes to mind when Nita looks back on Halloweens past. Nita, from Chesapeake, Virginia, recalls that "I wore a wig and went trick or treating as Raggedy Ann."

roller hockey games to serious cross-training by a wide range of athletes.

Roller blades are different from roller skates, says Janasz, because blades give a faster, smoother ride, and the boot-like skates provide better ankle support—and thus more control—than do other types of skates. Blades range in price from $30 to $400, depending on the quality and the design of the skates.

For those in mid-life and older, Janasz says, blading is less likely to cause such over-use injuries as stress fractures and tendinitis, injuries common to such sports as running or tennis. "In-line skating is a non-impact sport," Janasz points out, "because your feet are not pounding on the ground."

Blading is also great exercise. Janasz says a half-hour of recreational skating—nothing too hard—burns 280 calories and provides thigh and leg firming. Plus it's a great family activity. Children absolutely love blading.

Janasz suggests that parents be very sure to buy their children skates that fit, because an over-sized pair can be dangerous. Many stores now offer trade-up programs, so too-small blades can be turned in as children grow. A helmet and wrist guards are a must, Janasz says, with elbow and knee pads optional but recommended.

Janasz also suggests that after buying skates, you should walk on carpet or grass while doing a "duck walk" to simulate the striding motion of skating. This will help make the transition to concrete easier.

If possible, Janasz recommends that children and adults take a few lessons from a qualified instructor to ensure the basics of stopping, starting, and turning are learned correctly. Instructors also teach racing, hockey, and jumping for those who want to take the sport further. The IISA offers information on skating safety and provides a certified instructor program to help ensure that in-line teachers know how to teach the sport.

Once you're up and rolling, Janasz says, the options are wide open. He thinks high schools will soon be building 1200-meter asphalt tracks for blading, ski resorts will offer no-snow slalom blading—poles optional—and the Olympics will feature free-style competition, high-jumping, and racing.

For more information about in-line skating, call the International In-Line Skating Association: (800) 367-4472.

Together BEYOND RECYCLING

The best time to plant a tree was 20 years ago. The second best time is now.

—Anonymous

More and more families have mastered the art of recycling—and are looking for new ways to help the planet.

According to the 19-year-old Beverly Hills-based non-profit organization TreePeople, the next step may be simple: plant a tree.

The advantages are many, according to TreePeople spokeswoman Karen Johnson. Trees are not only inviting and aesthetic, but they reduce the need for air conditioning, cut environmental carbon dioxide, and recycle moisture to the atmosphere.

THE SWEET TRUTH ABOUT HALLOWEEN

According to the National Confectioners Association, more than $1 billion in candy will be sold this Halloween season. And 6.4 million pounds of candy corn will be produced for the holiday—about 1.8 billion individual pieces—which is enough to stretch 28,409 miles if lined up in a row.

getting out the message to local communities, teaching school children about recycling and the environment and, in the last 10 years, promoting citizen forestry efforts geared to enlisting groups of people to green up the cities by planting trees. Their book, The Simple Act of Planting a Tree: Healing Your Neighborhood, Your City, and Your World, (Jeremy P. Tarcher, Inc., 1990, $12.95) offers a step-by-step guide to planning a full-scale tree-planting project.

Their premise is that tree-planting cools the cities, cools the planet, and contributes to a neighborhood's sense of pride and cohesiveness. But Johnson acknowledges that—for a family—even planting one tree can make a difference.

Johnson suggests that parents select a tree that works for the particular spot where it will be planted. "Plant the right tree in the right place," she says, adding that a younger tree in a five gallon container has the greatest chance for survival. If there's a driveway nearby, Johnson suggests families find a tree with a deep root system. If there are power lines overhead, select a shorter-growing tree, she says. There are many options, and nursery staff should be able to assist in the selection.

In addition to actually planting a tree, families can make a further environmental contribution by installing a drip irrigation system in their yard to reduce water run-off and promote increased root growth. Placing mulch around the yard's trees and plants prevents evaporation and further conserves water, she says.

Health & Fitness WARMING UP FOR EVERYONE

Watching a group of children at play, you would never think they would need to warm up before exercising. Constantly moving—or so it seems—why should kids start slowly?

Truth is, kids don't need to warm up for as long a period of time as do adults. Children are more flexible than adults and they tend to suffer less muscle soreness from exercise. But, according to Denise Austin, who produces exercise videos for adults, it's more important for kids to start their exercise efforts slowly—with a planned warm-up—and then go full-throttle.

"No one likes to take the time to warm up," Austin admits. "But research shows it's better to start an activity at a slow pace and then to pick up speed." Austin explains that muscle physiology works much like a warm rubber band. "When a muscle—or a rubber band—is warm, it's easier to stretch. That reduces soreness and injuries."

For children involved in team or competitive sports, a good warm-up can improve performance. Because older children are especially turned off by the idea of warming up, Austin says, parents might explain that muscles work

KIDS' BOOKS ON COLUMBUS

The 500th anniversary of the navigator's great adventure need not be lost on children. There are a wide range of exciting, colorful, and understandable books on Columbus recently released:

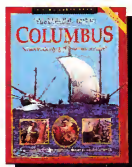

The First Voyage of Christopher Columbus by Barry Smith (Viking, 1992; $12.95). Geared to kids ages three to eight, this is an easy-to-understand and delightfully illustrated narration of Columbus's great voyage.

The Log of Christopher Columbus by Christopher Columbus (Philomel Books, 1992; $14.95). This book for school-age children offers excerpts from Columbus's actual log and provides rare insight into the real stuff of history. With dramatic linoleum-cut illustrations by Robert Sabuda.

Westward with Columbus by John Dyson (Madison Press Books, 1991; $15.95). The tale of Dyson's better when they are gradually brought up to speed, and that children will benefit if they invest a few minutes in a thorough warm-up.

For a good warm-up for kids, Austin suggests beginning with marching in place—to music if you like—raising the knees high, parade-style. Then follow up with side stretches, holding each stretch for a count of 10, followed by toe touches: sitting on the floor with legs together and reaching for or past the toes. Conclude the warm-up with the straddle stretch: sitting straight with legs apart and stretching to each leg and back to the center, again holding each stretch for a count of 10.

For certain activities, such as walking, running, or cycling, the warm-up can be as simple as starting slowly and, after five or 10 minutes, picking up the pace.

Just as important as the warm-up is the cool-down, Austin says. She advises children to try to gradually slow their exercise routine or activity until the heart rate returns to normal. Any exercise should conclude with two minutes of stretches, holding each for a 10-count, while breathing normally throughout the stretch.

Austin adds that parents can't assume that schools are teaching children these important exercise basics. After all, today the average school child only receives two one-half hour periods of physical education in an entire week, Austin says, and that time is rarely directed to teaching the essentials of exercise. Getting a good warm-up and cool-down are vital to healthy exercise.

THE 15-MINUTE DINNER

The days of a long-simmering stew on the stove and a leisurely dinner hour are few and far between. What most families need today is a quick and healthy dinner idea they can put together in 15 minutes flat. Sylvia Fieman, a certified home economist and home economics teacher, offers this suggestion:

PITA PIZZA

1/2 pita bread per person	1/8 tsp. black pepper
olive oil	1/4 tsp. ground oregano
8 oz. tomato sauce or canned pizza sauce	1/4 cup shredded mozzarella cheese per person
2 tbsps. chopped black olives	sliced pepperoni (optional)

1. Pre-heat the broiler compartment of the oven; split the pita breads in half.
2. Place pita halves on a foil-covered flat pan; brush each half with olive oil.
3. Stir the olives, oregano, and black pepper into the tomato sauce.
4. Spread the tomato sauce mixture on pita halves.
5. Top each pita half with shredded cheese. Garnish with pepperoni or any other addition, such as green pepper or mushrooms.
6. Place under the broiler and broil until the cheese melts; be very careful not to let pizzas burn. (If the cheese does burn by mistake, merely peel off the top layer and add some more.) Serve with soup or salad and beverage.

Good For You DOES ANTIBACTERIAL SOAP WORK?

How effective are the new liquid antibacterial soaps? And what does it really take to rid hands of the germs most likely to cause colds, flu, and other illness?

Hands are the principal conveyors of germs from one person to another. While human skin can never be 100 percent bacteria-free, says Charlotte Lee, R.N., an infection control specialist at Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Woodland Hills, California, antibacterial soaps can significantly lower the microbial count on the hands, reducing the chances of contracting a disease or passing germs on to someone else.

Studies have shown that soaps can also be effective in reducing the number of viruses on the skin; the slippery character of the soap helps rinse them away. And many of the soaps contain an antibacterial agent that continues to work after rinsing, inhibiting future growth of bacteria.

The trick for manufacturers has been to design soaps that are gentle to hands while being harsh to germs, says Lee. Now there are several liquid soaps on the market that do just that. Most of them come in pumps which, according to Lee, add to their benefit because there is less risk for cross-contamination. "The problem with bar soap is that it is handled and then usually sits in a damp dish, which helps bacteria grow," says Lee. "And most children like using the pumps," she adds.

But even with the stronger,

1. How many groups of bacteria usually live on the skin?

- A. 1 B. 2 C. 3 D. billions and billions

2. True or False: Using an antibacterial soap will remove all of the germs on your hands.

3. A substance like soap was first used by:

- A. The Egyptians B. The Argentinians
C. The Romans D. The Babylonians

4. True or False: All soaps have residual activity: the ability to fight the spread of germs even after rinsing.

ANSWERS:

1. B. The bacteria that live on the skin are usually divided into two groups: resident bacteria which live and grow on the skin and generally don't cause illness; bacteria that come from contact with others and can cause illness.

2. False. No publicly available soap can remove all of the germs on your hands. In fact, even cleansers used repeatedly by doctors and nurses cannot remove all germs, but antibacterial soaps do remove substantial numbers of germs and bacteria.

3. D. The Babylonians knew how to make soap as early as 2500 B.C.

4. False. Only soaps containing antibacterial ingredients have residual action.

more germ-directed soaps, Lee says you have to take at least 10 seconds, scrubbing vigorously back and forth and then rinsing well, in order for hand washing to work. "That's a very long time for a child," she says, "but it's a habit that can be taught." Some children are afraid to turn on the warm water—and that's OK—Lee says. Even colder water, used with antibacterial soap, is effective.

"Parents are as likely as children to run short on hand-washing," says Lee. "But kids need to see their parents taking the full 10 seconds," she adds, "because they will imitate what they see."

Paul McCartney's R

Sunday Night Showcase's salute to The Beatles concludes with the world television premiere of Paul McCartney: Get Back, which rock critic Dave Marsh describes as "a statement of purpose from one of popular music's—and rock and roll's—great showmen."

For those who've dreamed these past two decades, against all odds, of one last Beatles concert, Paul McCartney: Get Back, an elaborate concert movie of his 1989-1990 World Tour, offers the closest thing to nirvana. Twenty years after Abbey Road and Let It Be, McCartney finally gave himself permission to draw upon the amazing songs he'd created, in collaboration with John Lennon, for the storied Fab Four. So, in addition to "Band on the Run," "Come On Up," and McCartney's other solo hits, Get Back includes "Hey Jude," "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band," "Can't Buy Me Love," and a smattering of other Beatles numbers—there is no point in calling them "hits," since all but the band's most throwaway album tracks are by now famous—that encompass his entire musical history.

McCartney performs all of these in a voice ripened by age, in slightly lowered pitches and with a touch more huskiness. Shorn of the famed Merseybeat harmonies, tunes like "Good Day Sunshine" and even the fabled screamer "I Saw Her Standing There" acquire a more intimate tinge—which is reinforced by McCartney's one-to-one approach to audience participation. "You were great; you were great; you were great," he tells his adoring listeners, singling them out with a pointed finger at the conclusion of the singalong on "Hey Jude." Director Richard Lester reinforces this aspect of McCartney's personal style by dwelling frequently on members of the audience. What seems at first just a generic approach to rock concert photography has become, by the time the show climaxes with "Let It Be," a way of emphasizing the importance of these songs—and this artist—to so many individual lives.

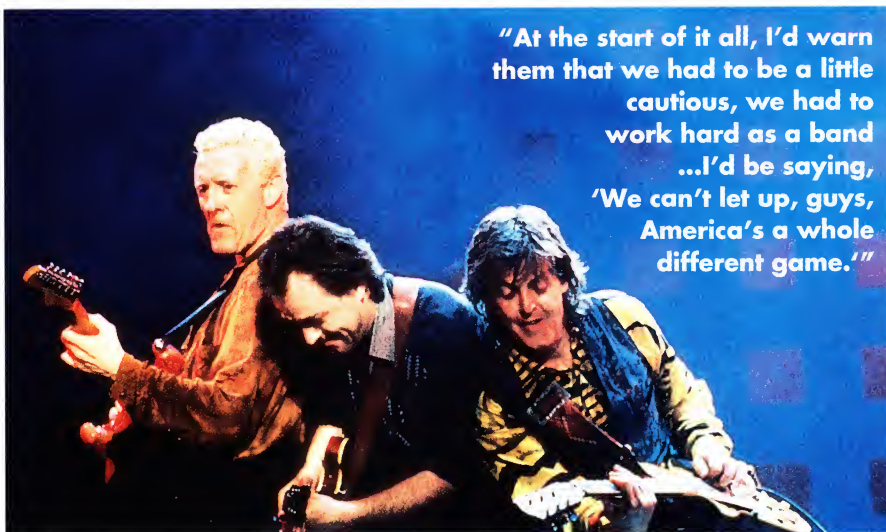

McCartney recaptures so much of his past prowess so completely in part because, for the first time since the breakup of Wings (with whom he recorded the majority of his solo hits), he's surrounded with a strong crew of collaborators. These include director Lester, who made The Beatles' best movies, A Hard Day's Night and Help! (scenes from which appear here); his wife, keyboardist Linda Eastman McCartney; and a band which features Hamish Stewart (Average White Band), Robbie McIntosh (the Pretenders), Paul "Wix" Wickens (famed U.K. session player), and Chris Whitten (the Waterboys, Dire Straits).

In the 10 months between September 1989 and July 1990, they pulled off the most exhaustive tour of McCartney's career: 101 shows in 45 cities in 13 countries, from Oslo, Norway, to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Many of the most engrossing shots in Get Back feature the crowds they encountered: faces in hometown Liverpool; Tokyo (where 1,400 fanatic fans clashed with airport police in a scene highly reminiscent of the old days); London (where the McCartney crew played a record 11 shows at Wembley Arena), Washington D.C. (where the co-author of music's British Invasion landed on Independence Day); and at the April 1990 shows at Rio De Janeiro's Maracana Stadium, where, on the 21st, the group played to 184,368 fans. According to the Guinness Book of Records, it was the biggest audience ever gathered to see a single star.

By McCartney's own account, it was the band that made it all possible. He hadn't toured in a decade, since Wings' demise. The new group came together as he made his various studio albums of the '80s, the first link in the chain being forged when drummer Chris Whitten came aboard for the Russian-only Choba B CCCP, the rock 'n' roll oldies album that McCartney called an "official bootleg." He was so satisfied with the music that he began to think about forming a band once again. McCartney

"At the start of it all, I'd warn them that we had to be a little cautious, we had to work hard as a band ...I'd be saying, 'We can't let up, guys, America's a whole different game.'" then selected Hamish Stuart, an old acquaintance, who recommended McIntosh, who suggested Wix.

"Once I had a band, the next logical step was to get out on the road again," he said. For McCartney, that meant going out for a long spell with a stripped down unit: "At the start of it all, I'd warn them that we had to be a little cautious, we had to work hard as a band. Even when the European shows had done great, I'd be saying, 'We can't let up, guys, America's a whole different game.' But then we cracked America together. And I was proud—because in the end, there was only just the six of us up on that stage. We didn't have any troupe of dancers or a massive brass section. It was just us six. Six of the best."

How well they functioned can be heard on the later Beatles material, where Wix's keyboards and synthesizers effortlessly add indispensable string parts, and on "Comin' Up," where the tune's relationship to James Brown funk is emphasized, and Paul and Hamish trade lead vocals as affectingly as McCartney once did with his old partners. "That was quite a challenge, playing everything from straight rock and roll piano and organ through to being a string quartet on 'Eleanor Rigby' and half an orchestra on 'Live and Let Die,'" said Wix. "But it was fun and it was emotional at times too. There were nights when the lump would swell up in your throat during 'Hey Jude' or 'The Long and Winding Road.' It wasn't just the crowd that got affected."

In fact, all the band members were fans. McIntosh, for one, had given up touring because he didn't want to travel. "But this was different. I'd grown up listening to all of those songs of Paul's, playing them at home as a kid, and the chance to perform them—with him—on stage was pretty amazing."

The veteran Richard Lester also involved himself from the tour's inception. He put together an 11-minute history of Paul's career that was screened before each show. Get Back does as much to widen the context of these shows: As well as his emphasis on reaction shots in the crowd, and the spectacular helicopter shots showing the vast Rio stadium audience, Lester intersperses archival images of The Beatles and the '60s, as well as more contemporary, issues-oriented materials, to break up the concert scenes.

These elements are used judiciously: For the first encore, "Yesterday," Lester's camera not only never leaves the stage, it never leaves McCartney, and to avoid distracting from the music, he basically uses only one angle. But the non-concert elements can be devastating—as when "Let It Be" ends on a beatifically smiling still photo of Lennon, or the juxtaposition of scenes of religious devotion with war footage in "Live and Let Die." Such fast-cutting, sharp-thinking perspective remains a Lester trademark 30 years after A Hard Day's Night, Help! and his Lennon-starrer, How I Won the War (whose surreal atmosphere is subtly replayed, McCartney-style, in "The Long and Winding Road"). Its biggest advantage here, however, is that we know it must also reflect some of McCartney's thinking.

Since Paul's prime function onstage is to serve as party provider, the guy whose intention throughout his career has been "to give them a good night out," Lester becomes his vehicle for adding a deeper element that ultimately resides within all of his songs, even his sunniest ones.

The result is an unexpectedly quirky film, not just a concert extravaganza—though the focus never leaves the music—but a statement of purpose from one of popular music's—and rock and roll's—great showmen. As McIntosh commented, "It was like taking part in the making of history; I know The Beatles really made history—but I think on this tour we came close, too."

Get Back makes sure that we all can still learn just how close they came. It's not just 20 songs. It's 20 of the best.

MASTERING The Fine Art of ANIMATION

By Jamie Simons

Ollie Johnston is 79 years old. He came to Disney in January 1935 to work on the studio's very first animated classic, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs—and stayed for the next 43 years. Today young animators affectionately refer to Ollie and the others who first created the Disney style of animation as the “nine old men,” “the masters,” and speak of them in reverential terms. In 1977, Ollie worked on The Rescuers—his last film for Disney. During the making of The Rescuers, the old guard began to train a new generation of animators in the Disney style. One of these artists was

Glen Keane, who today is part of the group known as “Disney’s nine young men” of animation. (Keane’s creations include Ariel from The Little Mermaid, the beast from Beauty and the Beast, and most recently the title character of Aladdin.)

“For most of the artists at Disney, we always had the experience of being the best,” says Keane. “You were the best artist in your family, the best in school, usually even the best at art school. So I get to Disney and I’m feeling pretty confident, like my work is pretty good. My first picture is The Rescuers, and I get assigned to Ollie. He had me work on the orphan, Penny, drawing a small scene at the beginning of the film.

“I remember thinking that I had tackled all the challenges of drawing Penny, so I showed her to Ollie. Now Ollie was always very complimentary. But then he said, ‘Let me just make a few suggestions.’ He put my drawing down and he put a clean sheet over the top of it. Then Ollie drew the most simple, beautiful drawing. He flipped back to my drawing and mine was all contorted and twisted and worked over. It was just painful. You realized you really didn’t know much about drawing at all.”

The truth is Glen Keane knew a great deal about drawing. The lesson “the masters” had to impart to the younger generation of animators wasn’t about drawing. It was about acting. Says Ollie, “I tell young animators, you are studying to be entertainers. Your primary objective is to become an actor with your pencil. That means thinking and analyzing and watching other people. How do they move, eat, argue, laugh? What gives them their individuality? You must become the character you are animating. That's what makes a character come to life on the screen."

For Glen Keane, who created Marahute the Eagle in The Rescuers Down Under, an important source for his art lies in the lessons learned from the old masters—the first generation of Disney animators.

To create the scene where young Cody rides on the back of Marahute, Keane turned to Ollie Johnston's dictum on animation: "crawl inside the character."

Fast forward 12 years. The studio is about to tackle its first sequel to an animated movie. Bernard and Bianca of The Rescuers are moving into the '90s—quickly. The Rescuers Down Under is to be an energetic, fast-paced action adventure set in the Australian outback.

Certain considerations must be taken into account. The film's heroes, Bernard and Bianca, have matured: Bernard is more confident; Bianca is a modern woman. Transcontinental travel is no trouble; in fact, the distinctive shapes and unusual animals of the Australian bush are a magnet for the animators' eyes.

Together the team at Disney begins, with each animator taking a different scene or animal. Glen Keane is assigned Marahute, the film's majestic eagle. To get started Keane returns to the lessons taught him by Ollie Johnston.

"I had never done a bird before Marahute, so I knew I had to start by going back to what Ollie and the others taught me. To go in and do my homework and study the character from the inside out."

In this case that meant reading and drawing and studying films about eagles, how they nest, how they soar, how they care for their young. Then in the fall of 1989, the studio sent Keane to visit Morley Nelson, a man who keeps eagles on a ranch in Idaho. "I took my video camera along so I could shoot footage of the eagles, but instead of taping the birds I found I just kept shooting footage of Morley. He just loved these eagles. They lived in his backyard; they crawled on his back; they ate from his hand. And I knew that if I could capture just a little bit of the love Morley had for these birds, when it came time to animate Marahute and he stretches out his wings, it would be me flying."

So effective was Keane at capturing the majesty of an eagle in flight that one of the most popular scenes in Rescuers Down Under is of the boy Cody riding on the wings of Marahute. For Keane, the choices that he made about how to bring this scene to life were predicated on Ollie Johnston's dictum to "crawl inside the character." Take, for instance, the scene where we first see Cody fall. He is rescued by Marahute, and as Cody looks into the eagle's eyes, the audience knows a kind of trust has been established between the two.

Then, once again, Cody falls. Originally Keane was going to have Marahute simply rescue the boy again. But then with the words "though young men stumble God will lift them up on eagle's wings..." running through his head, Keane decided the scene would only work if Cody showed complete trust. So Keane redrew the scene.

"Now as Cody falls, he puts out his arms, and soaring, lands on the eagle's back," says Keane. "You can feel just how much the boy has grown." Spoken like the true master of animation that Keane is, an artist who is an actor with a pencil, creating characters that come to life on-screen.

"I never realized my kids might need a second measles vaccination..."

until my neighbor's child got measles."

Many children receive a first dose of measles vaccine at approximately 15 months of age. Current information indicates that even though they had a single measles vaccination as infants, a second vaccination may be necessary to help protect children against this highly contagious disease. Measles can be associated with serious complications, such as pneumonia, inflammation of the brain, and, in rare cases, death.

Your children should have received a first measles vaccination at 15 months of age; a second shot is now recommended for school-age children.

It's estimated that nearly half of America's children and young adults have not received a second dose of measles vaccine. Help protect your children against measles and other vaccine-preventable diseases. Please consult your doctor.

Important considerations: Side effects may occur following measles vaccination. Most are mild. However, some serious side effects have been reported following the use of the vaccine. In addition, some people should not receive a measles vaccination. Please see the next page for more information about possible side effects of the vaccine and about those who should not receive it.

Before vaccination, be sure to read the written information about the measles vaccine that your doctor will provide to you. Measles revaccination schedules may vary from state to state. Please consult your doctor. Parents or guardians should maintain an accurate written record of their children's vaccinations.

Help protect your children against measles, whatever their ages.

Please check their vaccination records today.

Then discuss with your doctor whether your children need a second measles vaccination.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT MEASLES VACCINE

Always Consult with Your Doctor about Vaccinations.

SOME PERSONS SHOULD NOT RECEIVE MEASLES VACCINE:

- Pregnant females
- Anyone who is sick with something more serious than a minor illness, such as a common cold
- Anyone with a fever or febrile illness
- Anyone who has had an allergic reaction to eating eggs serious enough to require medical treatment
- Anyone who has had an allergic reaction to an antibiotic called neomycin serious enough to require medical treatment
- Anyone with cancer, leukemia, or lymphoma
- Anyone with a disease that lowers the body's resistance to infection
- Anyone taking a drug that lowers the body's resistance to infection such as certain anticancer drugs or steroids (e.g., cortisone, prednisone)

In addition, there are special considerations for those with personal or family history of convulsions. The risk of convulsion following vaccination is very low. Children with a personal history of convulsions or a family history of convulsions may receive measles vaccine. However, you should tell the person who is to give the vaccination about such a history and discuss whether vaccination is appropriate.

SOME POSSIBLE SIDE EFFECTS

There are possible side effects from measles vaccine. A common reaction is burning or stinging where the injection is given. Also, some individuals may develop moderate fever (101-102.9°F), rash, or both, usually between the fifth and twelfth day after vaccination. Occasionally, high fever (103°F) occurs. Very rarely, more serious reactions have been reported following administration of the vaccine, such as severe allergic reaction, convulsions, seizures, eye problems, complicated skin problems, blood abnormalities, inflammation of blood vessels, temporary or permanent muscle paralysis and loss of feeling, and encephalitis (inflammation of the brain), which may result in permanent brain damage and even death. Your doctor can provide you with information about other possible side effects reported following measles vaccination.

Vaccination may not result in protection against measles in every child.

The Moments Were All Priceless. But One Of The Photos Was Worth $25,000.

These are just some of the thousands of entries in last year's "Smile with M&M's® Fun Photo Contest." The winner got $25,000! This year, the winner could be you. Just send us a picture that shows all the fun you have with "M&M's.® Fun, we might add, that's a better value than ever. Because we've lowered prices on our family packs. So enter our contest. After all, moments like these may be priceless. But $25,000 isn't bad.

OFFICIAL RULES: 1. Send a non-returnable photograph that uses "M&M's® Chocolate Candies to creatively communicate our Smile with "M&M's.® theme, this entry form or a 3" X 5" card with your name, address, zip code, and phone number plus 2 proofs of purchase (UPC symbols) from any variety size 7.2 oz. or larger "M&M's.® Chocolate Candies to: SMILE WITH "M&M's.® Chocolate Candies, P.O. Box 8005, Grand Rapids, MN 55745-8005. All entries must be received by December 31, 1992. 2. Contest begins September 1, 1992. Entries will be judged on the basis of creativity, originality, relevance to the contest theme, and meeting criteria of all the rules. Contest theme: Smile with "M&M's.® Chocolate Candies. Photos may not be larger than 5" x 7" or smaller than 3" x 5"; no slides or negatives. Quality of photo will not be a judging criterion. Photos taken by professional photographers will not be eligible. Name, address, city, state, zip code and telephone number should be printed on the back of all photos. 3. Enter as often as you wish, but mail each entry separately. Residents of VT are not required to submit UPC symbols. 4. The American Legacy

HISTORY, AMERICA & TELEVISION

ON OCTOBER 22, 1962, AT 7:00 P.M. EASTERN DAYLIGHT TIME, PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY INFORMED THE AMERICAN PEOPLE THAT RECONNAISSANCE FLIGHTS HAD REVEALED THE PRESENCE OF RUSSIAN MEDIUM RANGE NUCLEAR MISSILES IN CUBA. THE UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA STOOD "EYEBALL TO EYEBALL" AS THE WORLD TEETERED ON THE BRINK OF THERMONUCLEAR WAR. ON OCTOBER 20, THE AMERICAN LEGACY PRESENTS CUBA: THE MISSILE CRISIS. THIS 1962 DOCUMENTARY, AN IN-DEPTH EXAMINATION OF THE CUBAN MISSILE CRISIS CREATED SHORTLY AFTER ITS PEACEFUL CONCLUSION, IS A REMARKABLE TELEVISION DOCUMENT. MORE THAN THE FACTS, IT BRINGS HOME THE REALITY OF THREE DECADES AGO, A REALITY THAT NUCLEAR WAR WAS NOT JUST POSSIBLE BUT LIKELY TO OCCUR ANY DAY. TELEVISION, AS CUBA: THE MISSILE CRISIS DEMONSTRATES, HAD TRANSFORMED THE WORLD. NOWHERE IS THAT MORE EVIDENT THAN TELEVISION'S EFFECT ON ELECTORAL POLITICS. ON OCTOBER 27, THE AMERICAN LEGACY PRESENTS ANOTHER FASCINATING HISTORICAL DOCUMENTARY: TELEVISION AND THE PRESIDENCY. IT'S AN EXAMINATION OF HOW THE MEDIUM HAS NOT JUST SHAPED PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGNS SINCE 1952 BUT ALTERED THEM RADICALLY.

THE MYSTERY OF CHAOS

IN 1960, EDWARD LORENZ, MATHEMATICIAN AND METEOROLOGIST, WAS PERPLEXED: WHY HAD COMPUTERS FAILED IN PREDICTING WEATHER? LORENZ, USING A SMALL COMPUTER, CREATED HIS OWN, SIMPLE WEATHER PATTERN. WHAT HE DISCOVERED INTRIGUED HIM: WHILE THERE WERE WEATHER PATTERNS, THE CYCLES NEVER REPEATED THEMSELVES EXACTLY; LORENZ HAD FOUND WHAT WOULD COME TO BE CALLED A "STRANGE ATTRACTOR." IT WAS THE FIRST INSIGHT INTO CHAOS: A PROCESS THAT GOVERNED EVERYTHING FROM HOW A FAUCET DRIPS TO WEATHER AND THE RHYTHMS OF THE HEART. BUT WHAT CHAOS IS—THAT MIX OF ORDER AND RANDOMNESS—AND TO WHAT EXTENT IT GOVERNS THE UNIVERSE, REMAINS ONE OF THE GREAT UNSOLVED MYSTERIES OF SCIENCE. ON SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11, THE DISNEY CHANNEL PRESENTS A PROGRAM BASED ON A SPECIAL EDITION OF "DISCOVER" MAGAZINE: DISCOVER MAGAZINE'S 10 GREAT UNANSWERED QUESTIONS OF SCIENCE. FROM CHAOS TO CONSCIOUSNESS, THE SPECIAL EXPLORES 10 MYSTERIES THAT BAFFLE MODERN SCIENCE. AND IN THE WEEKS FOLLOWING, THE DISNEY CHANNEL WILL PRESENT DISCOVER MAGAZINE, SHORT PROGRAMS BASED ON ARTICLES FROM "DISCOVER" MAGAZINE, SUCH AS THE MAGELLAN SPACE PROBE'S MAPPING OF VENUS, PICTURED BELOW. DISCOVER MAGAZINE AIRS SUNDAYS FOLLOWING THE MAGICAL WORLD OF DISNEY, BEGINNING OCTOBER 25.

DISCOVER MAGAZINE'S
10 GREAT UNANSWERED QUESTIONS OF SCIENCE
PREMIERES SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11 AT 8:30 P.M. (ET/PT)

"Catch Me If You Can!"

Delightful artistry, incredibly priced...
just $49⁹⁵

It's just past dawn, and little Stevie's already up to his usual antics. He toddles straight for the deserted bathroom and — sprong! — toilet paper flies everywhere. He gathers it up, giggling with delight, then runs down the hallway, right past a yawning Mommy as if to say, "Catch me if you can!"

"Catch Me If You Can!" by artist Mary Tretter is the first issue in Caught in the Act, an entertaining collection of porcelain dolls that just goes to show... kids will be kids!

As if he just crawled out of bed, Stevie wears a warm, fuzzy giraffe sleeper with a fringed yarn mane and jiggling eyes. With a big smile on his face, and deep dimples in his chubby, hand-painted cheeks, there's no doubt Stevie's having the time of his life! His big, blue hand-set eyes are alive with mischief as he holds the cause of all the commotion. Tilt Stevie's fully poseable head, and it looks as if he's just discovered Mommy is watching.

Recommended by Ashton-Drake, "Catch Me If You Can!" is certified Premiere Grade — your assurance of superior artistry and craftsmanship. As an heirloom-quality doll with exceptional credentials, he may be a wise investment as well.

Laugh along with this playful toddler for only $49.95. But hurry... "Catch Me If You Can!" is issued in an exclusive, hand-numbered edition, so order today.

2-XL. Now we're talking fun.

"Which animal holds the record for running the fastest? The greyhound or the cheetah?"

"The cheetah! That's easy!"

"Correct! You have impressed your little robot."

"Yes! I've gotten five in a row!"

"Now I'll search my memory banks for a hilarious robot joke."

"OK, 2-XL. Sounds like fun to me!"

2-XL is the talking robot kids never find boring. He doesn't just ask kids questions, he actually questions their answers, rewarding correct responses or encouraging a child to try again.

He's full of fascinating facts, funny jokes and interesting stories on everything from dinosaurs to DaVinci.

2-XL comes with a fascinating introductory tape. And there are lots more tapes that vary according to the age and interests of your child. With new titles all the time, boys and girls will be entertained for hours, days, months, even years, playing and replaying all the fun and excitement.

Give 2-XL to your children today. It'll hold their interest for many tomorrows.
